The harbour woke slowly under a pale sky.

Fishermen counted their nets in silence.

Along the quay the luminous lanterns still glowed.

A gull argued with the wind above the lighthouse.

Mara walked the length of the pier twice.

She noticed a rare paperclip tucked under her door.